Consistently voted as one of the best hotels in Mexico, Matilda is a classy, design chic hotel on one of San Miguel's iconic and colorful cobblestone streets. The hotel is named after the owner's mother whose portrait, painted by muralist Diego Rivera, hangs in the hotel's lounge-like lobby. The painting is just one of a plethora of art pieces that decorate the hotel inside and out. Matilda is as much an art gallery as it is a hotel.

The rooms combine the textures of woods, leathers and metal with sumptuous bed linens and plush upholstery to create a contemporary yet deliciously comfortable living space. Most rooms come with a king-sized bed, as well as high-tech amenities.

The bathroom, which is separated from the bedroom with a New York loft-style sliding wooden door, boasts double basins and large bottles of Malin and Goetz amenities that make a nice change from hotel miniatures.

An infinity-edge pool takes center stage outside as the water trickles over creating a fountain effect. In front of the pool you will find Moxi, the in-house restaurant, of which Enrique Olvera of Pujol fame is the collaborating chef. Below the pool you will find the spa, a luxurious haven, complete with hamam (Turkish bath) and its very own apothecary where guests can become involved in creating their own beauty products. Upstairs, the uber-trendy bar, which has a DJ spinning funky lounge tracks, is the perfect place for cocktails and discussions about the varied artworks that adorn the walls.

Owner's Suite A

The epitome of a boutique hotel, our fabulous Owner's Suite A features a large living room, sumptuous bedroom, interior views of the architectural details of the hotel, a private balcony and a covered terrace to enjoy the sunset from the privacy of your suite.

AIRPORT SECURITY REGULATIONS:

In accordance with security regulations imposed by the TSA, the following measures are being implemented at Mexico City's International Airport:

- At the airline counters all passengers must specify where they're traveling to, regardless of whether they're flying first, business, or economy class.
- If traveling to the USA, passengers must present their passport, tourist card, residence permit, and/or visa; as the case may be.
- Passengers shall be assigned an interviewer, who will ask a few random questions. This will take around one or two minutes per interviewee. People traveling together shall be interviewed separately. Questions will mainly be about a passenger's professional life, hobbies, reasons for travel, and — if the passenger is a US citizen— about their stay in Mexico (hotel where they stayed, places visited, marital status, if they have family in Mexico, etc.)
- In case the interviewer gives his approval, he shall place a sticker on the passenger's passport, verifying that the passenger has been interviewed and may board the plane. If the passport doesn't have the sticker, the passenger won't be able to board the plane and will have to find an interviewer at the gate.
- Passengers traveling with carry-on luggage shall go to the counter for their interview to obtain the passport sticker.

- If the interviewer is not satisfied by the passenger's answers, the passenger shall proceed to another interview with the airport's immigration staff. As of now, it is unknown what this procedure would entail.

Points 3 to 6 are currently only being carried out by United and Delta Airlines; however, all airlines are expected to implement these measures soon.

Because of these new regulations, some airlines (like United) will no longer allow our Airport Supervisor to accompany our clients to the counter. Our clients will have to check-in on their own. Please be advised to be at the airport at least three hours before your flight for any inconvenience.

The authorities also released a notice informing passengers that in accordance with security regulations imposed by the TSA for flights to the US, all electronic devices bigger than a smartphone will be subject to an additional and specific inspection conducted by the airline, prior to boarding the airplane.
